THE F-WORD !!

Friday night !! Andy had just boasted that whilst all his colleagues would be stuck in the office for that ensuing Saturday, he would be off playing for the mighty Wyoming 35DS team ... and then his phone beeped ... a message from Meady. Brilliant, surely a sneak preview of tomorrow's line-up: who was in? who was out? what injury had Dave given himself this week? little appetisers for the Chronicles to come ... but then as he read message he saw the f-word, yes that f'ing f-word -- forfeit ! Could it be, Round 2 and already a team was forfeiting? Saturday had been weighing up to be an epic battle, the former 35ES champions - Wyoming (2013), and Avoca (2014) - meeting for the first time. Alas, the wait goes on. In the meantime, Wyoming picks up an easy 3pts and a bonus of two goals (one we envision was beautifully scored by Dave in a scissor kick akin to Tim Cahill's in the Asian Cup; and the second was claimed by Flanno when he fist-punched the ball into the net. The ref missed this obviously !!

MISSING THAT SPARKLE

One player that would've remained on the absentee list for the Avoca game had it been played was the other half of the dynamic Grandfather Central duo -- Framey. The reason why, he does not have boots yet. He has found one, a perfect boot, gold and diamond-studded that matches the tiara he was given a couple of years back. Unfortunately the other half remains beyond his grasp. From the misty mountains of Mangrove to the marshes of Gosford creek, Framey has wandered the coast in search of the missing boot. Many have heard of his tribulations and brought to him what they believe is the other half but alas no matter how many he has tried on, none have been the perfect match, the shoe has not fit. With no game scheduled the following weekend due to Anzac Day, Framey had resigned himself to not playing till May. Whether Avoca really did lack the numbers or someone has conjured up magical, mystical forces to get an easy three points without Framey who knows, but let's hope we see him at the next game laced up, ready to go and sparkling !!

A FOR ASHTON

So with the early news of no game on Saturday, most of the team probably would've taken it easy that Friday evening. Some may have embellished in one or two more alcoholic beverages than usual, sitting back on the lounge and enjoying - or weeping in the case of the majority of the team's backline - as Manly made it six loses out of seven. Andy though was not able to relax. Not because he'd now be going to work the next day but because of what he'd done that evening, something he was sure to suffer the wrath of Flanno when he found out ... At the request of his poaching brother, Andy had passed on Pauly's number. The next day, Paul was pulling on the boots for the Wyoming 35A's. Worse yet, the team won 2-0, Paul putting away one goal and setting up the other. What had Andy done ?? In hindsight, why didn't he pass on Jason's number instead, after all Jason had scored more goals than Paul thus far this season, albeit for the wrong team. If this is the last Chronicle to be released, you'll know why.

THE BLACK OUT!

The crazy storm of last Tuesday and Wednesday saw a majority of the team without power for several days. The Quills managed to get presidential treatment and have their power restored before the majority of Wyoming residents, many of whom were out for over 4 days. The Mead family appear to have trumped all as they went FIVE AND A HALF days without, they're so competitive that lot!! Luca was just happy his was restored in time to watch his beloved AC Milan play on Sunday morning. Kev Lee suspects there may be a big baby boom in nine months time so maybe that hints what he got up to in the dark. Word had it that Chris lit up Narara on Friday evening when he broke out into song but sadly the area returned to darkness when Yvonne knocked him out. Unfortunately the Creccas lost their pool from a fallen tree that not only flooded their neighbour's yard but apparently made it's way to Gavenlock Oval too ... Luca lost no sleep over the latter.

Hope all are okay after the insane past week. Social media was ablaze with the kindness of those more fortunate this past week offering hot showers, washing machines, power points and fridge space - particularly so not to waste their quality Singos meat (what a plug !!). Another reminder of how awesome this group is. I thank all for their generosity. Hopefully, until the zombie apocalypse starts, the worst is beyond us. So, cheers ...
